

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for performing failure mode and effects analysis of an intended process includes gathering data related to failures and deficiencies occurring in a similar process. Then, potential failures and deficiencies are identified in the intended process by a first entity based on the gathered data. Finally, a failure mode and effects analysis is performed on the intended process by a second entity based on the potential failures identified by the first entity.